AİNA Newsclipping, a weekly news review, aims to make a selection of quality international and domestic articles available to Afghan media, NGOs and the government. The publication's ambition is to bring the broadest outlook on international and regional developments to key individuals involved in the country's reconstruction, at a moment when access to information is still a luxury. Articles are published in English, Dari and Pashtu and drawn from international, regional and local sources (including press from the provinces of Afghanistan). Sources are newspapers, newswire and the Internet. Distributed in Kabul and the main cities of Afghanistan, AİNA Newsclipping aims to reflect international and Afghan events and opinions in all their diversity, giving a special place to debate and analysis. It is hoped that this publication will assist Afghan media to provide their audience with the widest possible panel of opinion and information, and help all citizens to make informed choices.
